Special Projects - Skill Training in Homestay

Homestay is a popular form of hospitality and lodging whereby visitors stay at the residence of a local in the state they are travelling.

Name: Aboli Swu

"The training on homestay was very fruitful for me since it enabled me to know the privileges of how a functioning homestay could really help impact the society. Tourists are more attracted to homestays as they are interested in learning about our culture and traditions. The training taught us how to visualise our business in bigger vision. Positive attitudes, requirements were also mentioned in order to build our confidence, which I believe was effective."

Name: Vibino Sabina

"Homestay training was fruitful and awakening. There is a significant growth in tourism in the state; for a person like me, this acted as a motivation to pursue a vocation in tourism and hospitality. The training was an empowering ground for better communication and knowledge. Knowing about promotions and marketing improved my set up and the hands-on activities on tourism and management boosted my confidence in dealing with the clients.

While I have been running the same homestay for last three years, my homestay has gained more clients post training. I learnt if I had 6 hours to chop down a tree, I need 4 hours to sharpen my axe. I did that in the training. Initially, I would look for clients for my Homestay but after the training, I started to have my Homestay for clients."

"I know my language..."
Story of Archana from Pune
An initiative by Sarthak

Archana was born with hearing impairment, however, had no formal learning of sign language. She used to communicate through her own signs and expressions. Post marriage, gradual increase in family expenses and kids’ education, compelled her to share financial responsibilities with her husband. Earlier restricted to her family and friends, now she had to communicate with the external world.

She came to know about Sarthak, an NGO working towards training and betterment of persons with disabilities. She visited the centre and was counselled about Sarthak’s format of training for hearing impaired individuals through sign language. She began her training of vocational skills and sign language together. The period of training was challenging but she successfully acquired requisite skills and basic sign language understanding, owing to which she cleared her interview in Westin Hotel.

Archana shares in sign language, that she is very happy, and her son and husband are proud of her achievement. She further shares, “The barrier between the world and me was not being deaf, but ignorance of sign language, and now as I know my language, I could communicate with anyone.”

“She believes, and we believe...”

Transforming skilled trainees into entrepreneurs: How LabourNet is breaking new grounds in skill development

After skilling, what? The logical answer is to get placed in a job or find a suitable form of wage or self-employment. The truth is that it is highly unrealistic to secure a stable job for every skilled person. In such a scenario, the other option is to encourage the trainees to become job creators rather than job seekers. This not only requires a shift in mindset but also organised support in the form of handholding, mentoring and providing access to networks and resources.

At LabourNet, one of our key initiatives is to promote entrepreneurship through our startup incubation centres. It involves an end-to-end process of launching a business, sustaining it and making it profitable. Whether it is about starting a Beauty Parlour, or an Automotive Service Centre or a Fast Food Joint, we focus on 5 important aspects:

Establishing a legal entity: Formalising any initiative through registration requires knowledge about document submission like PAN, payment of taxes/GST in compliance with existing norms.

Access to capital: Applying for loans like MUDRA, getting funded by investors, financial planning and maintaining healthy working capital is an integral part of the incubation process.

Market linkages: Understanding market dynamics, developing a customer-driven business, appropriate branding and sales is indispensable for business visibility and growth.

Capacity building: Hiring the right people, training them in requisite skills and being process-oriented is highly essential to scaling and accelerating business.

Using digital technologies: Cost effective mobile and digital strategies are an integral part of any business and every entrepreneur has to make it a part of the business strategy.

LabourNet’s startup incubation centres are currently supporting 7,000 entrepreneurs through the above 5-point strategy and we are sure they will set a trend in strengthening the economy with job-filled growth.
